RU Camden Health Sciences majors can now complete undergraduate social work courses beginning in their junior year and receive priority consideration for the Master of Social Work (MSW) during their senior year. Social work courses fit seamlessly into the health sciences major and course options include Introduction to Social Work & Social Justice; The Effects of Oppression on Minoritized Groups or Foundations in Social Work; Global Health Perspectives: Vulnerability, Human Health, and Well-Being; and more. Students who complete at least two social work courses with a strong GPA will be given priority consideration and an application fee waiver for the MSW program. An 18 credit minor in social work is also available, but not required for priority consideration.

Ranked one of the nation’s top 20 programs according to U.S. News & World Report, the Rutgers MSW provides an extraordinary combination of nationally recognized faculty and outstanding field education opportunities. MSW students can also earn an embedded certificate in one of the following specialized areas of social work:

- Addiction Counselor Training
- Aging & Health
- Promoting Child & Adolescent Well-Being
- Latina/o/x Initiatives for Service, Training, and Assessment
- Violence Against Women and Children
